LONDON, May 29, 5 A. M. Boyton encountered a contrary current near the English coast and drifted some distance to the northeast.

A favorable change was anticipated early in the morning.

BOYTON'S INTER-AQUEOUS INTINEBACY. Cape Grisnez, the "gray nose" where Boyton entered the water in order to commence his crosschannel march to England, is a headland of France, situated in the Pas-de-Calais. It is the nearest THE WORKINGMEN'S STRIKE ENDED-WAGES oint of the French shore to that of Britain, being almost directly opposite South Foreland. Its position is latitude 50 deg. 52 min. 12 sec. north, longitude i deg. 35 min. 15 sec. east.

THE PORELANDS. North and South, are the two celebrated headands of the Kentish coast of Britain, the first A HARTFORD STUDENT DROWNED. forming the northeast angle of the county of Kent and the most easterly land in England. The South Foreland is about sixteen miles south of the former, the Downs lying between them. There are two lighthouses, with fixed lights, to warn vessels coming from the south of their approach to the Goodwin Sands.

If Boyton was able to keep a direct line to the English shore, and that he has landed at or near while rowing on the Connecticut this evening. to Dover, he will have travelled a distance of twenty-three miles at the least; but it is likely that he had to make many deflections from the straight course in face of the very heavy sea which is at all times rupping in the track in which he ventured.

Bursa and Brusa-which has suffered so ratally by the visitation of a series of shocks of earthquake, as reported to us by cable, is situated in Asia Minor, in the province of Anatolia, at the north foot of Mount Olympus, fifty-seven miles south southeast of Constantino. ple. It is the capital of a sanjak. The population is about 69,000, including about 1,000 Armenians, 3,000 Greeks and 1,800 Israelites. It is built on a declivity, in a very fertile neighborhood, and has a magnificent external appearance. The houses are mostly of earth or wood and the streets narrow. but kept very clean by an abundance of streams It has between 200 and 300 mosques, some very handsome, large bazaars, numerous khans and colleges, several churches and synagogues, Armenian and other schools, and extensive suburbs. Its mineral baths have been famous in all ages; they are of various kinds and temperatures and mostly under cover of fine buildings. Northwest of the city are large swimming pools. The citadel, on a rock near the centre of the town, is mostly of Genoese construction, and the city contains various remains of antiquity. Broussa is one of the most flourishing commercial emporiums in the Turkish dominions. Its principal trade is in raw silks. It has manufactories of satin, cotton cloths, carpets, and it has also tapestry, gauze and a large traffic in corn, optum and meerschaum clay. Broussa was anciently the capital of Bithynia, and after the capture of Orchan, in 1356, it continued to be the capital and burial place of the

CAMEBON, OF THE COLLEGE CREW, ACCIDENTALLY DROWNED-STRUCK DOWN BY A TUG.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 28, 1875. Henry D. Cameron, a member of the Trinity College boat crew, a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y., and son of Donald Cameron, snipping merchant, of No. 116 Broad street, New York, was drowned Cameron was out with Hooker, of the College crew, and Sherman acting as coxswain, in a pairoared shell, and they got in the way of a tugboat, which struck them amidship, breaking the boat, which struck them amidship, breaking the boat, so that she rapidly filled with water and went down, Cameron, who could not swim, going down with her. Hooker and Sherman were picked up after having sunk under the boat, when rescue seemed almost impossible. The fault is partly that of the coxswain and partly of the tag, whose captain, with others is continually growing at shell racing on the rivet. Cameron was a member of the class of "seventy-six." twenty years of age and a fine fellow physically and morally, being a devout Christian. He stood second in his class, and was very popular there, in the entire College and among the professors and tutors, as well as in the town. His body has not yet been found.

THE NEWS IN BROOKLYN. A reporter of the HERALD called at the residence of the family in Brooklyn last night, and found the relatives of the late Mr. Cameron in great distress. No further intelligence than that given above had been received by them. Inquiries among the friends of the deceased confirmed the testimony given of his deep religious character. He was an ear est and constant attendant at the Sabbath school, and as soon as his preliminary education was finished be expressed a desire to enter the ministry, for which profession he was preparing at Trinity College, Hartford, at the time of his sudden death.

THE BLACK HILLS.

The Sioux Sulky at the Indifference of the Great Father.

THE COMPLAINTS OF THE INDIANS.

A Conneil with General Cowan and the Indian Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, May 28, 1875. One of the most important episodes in the transaction of Indian business, as relates to the Sioux, and which may have a bearing upon the facility with which arrangements can be made with then about the Black Hills, took place at the interior Department to-day. The sulky mood and completning manner of Red Cloud was beginning to show itself more strongly, because the grievances he had to make a statement of were not listened to by the Great Father. A no less interested and concerned person was lound in Professor Marsh, who was anxious that the President might dispose of the matter in controversy as to the quality of food furnished to the Indians and investigate, by personal inquiry, the truth or falsity of the charges made against the Indian Department, as might be developed by the parties in interest. These were c mposed primarily of Sloux chiefs Red Cloud, Spotted Tail and Red Dog, the latter of whom was absent. Next came the Indian Department, which was aroused as being affected by the statements made, and, finally, Professor Marsh, who had been too channel through which they had been to the ludian Commission in New York and to the President here, and who felt that he wished to be sustained by the and corroborative oral evidence of the Indians. cordingly, to this end the President, by an understood arrangement, was to meet the delegation of seven from among the Slong chiefs most prom inent of whom were Red Cloud and Spotted Tall. who, with Secretary Delano and Commissioner Smith, were to constitute the tribunal for the in-

THE ALLEGED EXISTING EVILS of bad treatment and rations for the Indians. Many people, who take interest in the Indians generally and in the gravity of the present undertaking as relates to the Sloux tribes and the negotiations aimed at with them, were rejoiced flually the President was going to listen to the complainings of the sensitive and exacting savages after the oldtime fashion. But some time after the hour of meeting, fixed upon at three o'clock this atternoon, the announcement was made by Commissioner Smith to the serious and expectant Indians that

THE PRESIDENT WOULD NOT BE ABLE to be with them. It also appeared that Secretary Delano would be absent, and then the disappointed Sioux were told that General Cowan, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Commissioner Smith would proceed with the inquiry.

Professor Marsh was present and, of course, be came absorbed in the proceedings as an interested party, and they were commenced at once by Commissioner Smith, who announced that they were ready to hear what the Indians had to say. Though the manner of General Cowan and Commissioner Smith was kind, they both bore an air of firmness and determination as the procoedings advanced. Tod Randall, some time ago an agent for the Indians, was designated by Red HIS CHOSEN INTERPRETER, while the Rev. Mr. Hinman acted in the interest of the department and as a check against any misinterpretation of what was said, in which capacity he was called on to correct the translation of Mr. Randall, which was several times rather free, if not incorrect. A great deal o. solicitude was manifested as to how the matter would turn out. Spotted Tail gave the first place to Red Cloud, abandoning his, seat and remained an attentive listener throughout. Red Cloud made very full statements, but was equivocal in the answers he gave to inquiries put to Protessor Marsh then took the cross examination; but, whether from the unreliable character of the Indian, when his interests are at stake, or the want of corroborative facts in evidence, the case he had heretofore presented and into which he was led by Red Cloud was not sustained. It is, however, contended by those who have sided with him in the controthat policy and the fear that the department might become prejudiced against the Sloux, decided Red Cloud and his brothers to weaken and equivocate, which they most glaringly did. At all events, whatever ma be the true merits, the old Scottish vergict of "not proven" would fairly apply. The officials of the department, General Cowan and Commissioner Smith, acted with fairness throughout, and Professor Marsh evidenced that he had not worked up his testiin support of the charges, to have reflected the great grievences which the Sioux had as to the poor quality and small quantity of the rations turnished them by the Indian De partment. The whole thing on the part of the Indians may be A HANGEUVER TO GAIN TIME, as they did not want to talk to-day on the Black Hills at the appointed time, and have interjected this as a subterfuge. A determined personal exchange of views between Professor Marsh and Commissioner Smits after the proceedings were over left the former in as strong advocacy of the correctness of his representations and their susceptibility of proci as ever, an avowal of which was made by him with as much warmth and animation as accompanied the accusing reprimand made by Commissioner Smith to him for the part be had taken dian Bureau. The interview between Assistant Secretary Cowan, Commissioner Smith and the Indians, however, settled one thing positively to-daytout, in obedience to the request of Red Cloud, a new Indian agent is to be given to the Sioux place of Dr. Saville, the present agent at Fort Laramic, and whatever may have been the complaint, imaginary or just, on the part of the Indians, it has had the effect of having their wishes gratified in one respect, at least, thus far, GENERAL BRADLEY'S LETEER.

Commissioner Smith, of the Indian Bureau, says in regard to the letter of General Bradley, pub- Jane I, and following evening. lished yesterday, that the cattle spoken of belonged to the contractors; that they were sick, some of them with broken limbs, and that they were not issued to the Indians, and that there was no intention of issuing them, simply because they were in such a poor and sick condition. He asserts that Red Dog's statement was incorrect and that Red Cloud informed him this morning that Red Dor iled when he told the story to General Bradley and Professor Marsh. The Commissioner also states that General Bradlev could have satisfied himself of this fact by a slight inquiry of the herdman or contractor if he had destred to do so.

THE GORDON BLACK HILLS EXPEDITION CAP-TURED BY THE TROOPS.

Омана, Neb., Мау 28, 1875. Information has been received from Fort Lara-mie that the Gordon Black Hills outfit, which bluffed Captain Walker off and proceeded on their way, were captured by Colonel Anson Milis' command. The entire outfit, excepting enough provisions to last them until they reached Fort Randall, was destroyed. Gordon, the leaser, is en route to Cherenne, a prisoner. The remainder of the party are en route to Fort Randall, under the escort of Captain Walker's command. Captain Walker has their arms and munitions. This is an evidence of the efficient watchfurness o the military over the Black Hills country.

TWO CHARMING NOVELS JUST ISSUED.

SIGNA. a story by "OULDA,"

Author of "Strathmore," "Under Two Flags," "Idalia," "Fuck," &c. 12mo. Extra cloth. Black and gilt ornamentation, $2. This story possesses in full measure these unmistakable characteristics of genius which have made Outsia's name famous wherever the best works of Euginsh fiction are read, it has all the intensity of feeling, all the luxuriance of language, and all the brilliant imagery of her carrier works. It sparkles with whe and witty sayings, and will doubtless prove a source of the freshest and keenest enjoyment to the thousand of readers whose judgment has very correctly pronounced the author of 'Signa' the most asscinating novel writer of the age.
